Lessons from Habakkuk

*Rev. Norbert Stephens – General Secretary
(UCJCI)*

Please read Habakkuk 1:1-4

At some time or the other all of us have engaged in sightseeing. Some of us in faraway places others of us within these shores. Indeed, some of us are seasoned tourists who have seen and experienced many, some or a few of the great sights and wonders of this world. Often for every visit we tend to ask two pertinent questions, “why?” and “how long?”

You see there are basically two ways to engage in sightseeing, the first is as a tourist, the second is with a mission in mind.

When you are a tourist, your sightseeing has intent without long-term investment. Your interest is to be informed and or inspired but the sight is merely one on your bucket list and while you might ask the questions of why and how long, once done, you are moving on to another sight. Intent without long-term investment.

When you sightsee with a missional focus in mind you have intent with long-term investment. This is not merely a place or issue on your bucket list; indeed, it is the bucket on your list. You are no longer a tourist, you become vested. For the location or issue requires both your ongoing presence and participation. Intent with long-term investment.

Truth be told, you cannot truly engage in mission without sightseeing. One enables the other... it's the act of sightseeing, which generates the mission, which in turn seeks to address the why and how long questions.

The prophet Habakkuk, like Martin Luther, engaged in sightseeing and the same generated for both the why and how long questions.

Chapter 1:1-11 is basically a prayer, which asks two questions, how and why? Habakkuk's concerns in these verses reflect a crisis on three fronts. There is a social crisis, a theological crisis and an external crisis. Injustice defines the crises. How long shall I cry for help, and you do not hear, why do you make me see wrongdoing and look at trouble? It is a cry for intervention which seems long in coming.

Social Crisis

Verses 2-4 outlines an underlying concern best described as institutional failure.

There were three areas of this institutional failure: When Habakkuk visited the significant institutions of his day, he encountered,

- Political Failure 1:4, rooted in the abuse of power, in the administration of King Jehoiakim.,

- Social Failure -The exploitation of the poor and the less privileged by the rich and powerful was a fundamental feature of his tour. The terms “violence” and “destruction/plunder” in 1:2-3. The social institution had failed thus producing moral and ethical failure.

- Judicial Failure - Judah's judicial system was characterized by “strife” and “contention” brought on by irresponsible litigation or the failure to administer justice properly. The victims of such abusive policies are identified as society's poor and marginalized. Such abuses of power are ultimately to blame, according to Habakkuk, for a society in which justice is absent and the law is ineffectual.

The institutional structures and systems created to provide and care for the people had failed! The structures and systems created to protect and defend the people had failed! The structures and systems created to affirm, inspire and guide the people had failed! Can we not say the same about our own crises? One writer states that, there is no greater distress than when power ordained for the service of justice makes injustice legal.

Habakkuk's description of institutional failure, (politics, social institutions, and judiciary) offers another truth. Significantly the failure was not experienced by the architects of the systems and institutions but rather the people they were meant to serve! And the result was injustice at all levels. So, he cried to God, as we are now crying, how long?

Theological Crisis

This raised for the prophet a theological crisis, thus he asked the why questions, why Lord? Why do you make me see wrongdoing, look at trouble, expose me to destruction and violence?

Habakkuk argued that the institutional failure has gone unnoticed and unpunished by God. Habakkuk therefore accuses God of sleeping on the job, in fact he clearly states that God is indifferent (2); inactive (3-4). Later he accuses God of being inconsistent (12-17).

What does it mean then to listen to Habakkuk at a time like this, both as a nation and as a missional church within this global context?

We know this book deals with the crisis of injustice, we are more than familiar with injustice, but we also know something else. We know that the greatest threat to hope is the loss of confidence in our sources of hope. Low morale is the killer blow to hope in any society. Institutional failure, expressed in political, social, economic, judicial or religious failure produces a loss of confidence and generates a low morale. When we lose confidence in the systems which should provide and care for us, protect and serve us, inspire and guide us, we lose hope! And the tell-tale sign is ambivalence: tourists with intent without long-term investment – those who are along for the ride, those who refuse to exercise their duty during an election, social concern, volunteerism...

When we, in the church, lose our confidence in the divine and by extension the gospel, we have nothing of substance and hope to offer to those who, in the midst of challenges, cry out how long or why and we live not in hope, but in delusion or we live with wishful thinking as our bed partner and our dreams for the future are like the lines in the famous song - Mona Lisa, many dreams have come to your doorsteps, they just lie there and they die there...

Missional Lessons

The grounding for hope lies in divine faith and divine faith produces confidence and confidence produces positive and hopeful possibilities for the present as well as for the future.

What then are the missional lessons for us? I offer us three for consider based on Habakkuk's role in this passage.

1. In the midst of his sightseeing, the prophet searched for a VIABLE FAITH. A faith, which would give him and his people both the confidence and the courage to face the systemic injustice with which they were confronted.

2. In the midst of his sightseeing, Habakkuk offered a VOCAL FAITH. He was not reticent to declare publicly his concerns and convictions. He was more than prepared to name the evil of his day and to lament the same. Evil not only thrives when good people do nothing, evil also thrives when God's people say nothing!

3. In the midst of his sightseeing, Habakkuk demonstrated a VISIBLE FAITH. He not only named the injustices of his day, he proceeded to do something about it. He sought God as the source of his theological grounding and without hesitation pursued his vocation as a prophet.

UCJCI Church School News November 2022

To: RDGS', Ministers, Pastors & Children's Ministry Leaders

From: Children's Ministry Commission

I greet you in the name of Jesus Christ our Saviour. November is Church School Month which will be observed under the theme: Reconnect, Reignite and Ready! Since, the start of 2022, we have been trying to get our children to come back to Church School. To date a number of our children are still absent from Church School. This is very disconcerting and we have to impress on the parents the important role that the church plays in the lives of their children, as a number of our children are allowed to stay home on a Sunday, roam the streets and use their electronic devices. We need to claim back our children for God, as some have come to a premature death by violence, fire, motor vehicle accidents, drowning, trafficking, etc. Therefore, during Church School Month let us go out and bring back our children, so we can reconnect and reignite their talents, gifts and leadership potential in our church's ministries and get them ready to share the love of Jesus with others.

From Former to Future Glory

When the children of Israel faced the reality of the destroyed temple, they knew that God's presence was no longer with them. They were traumatized by the removal of their final visible proof of God being with them. God reminds them that faith is more about Who is on the inside, than what is seen on the outside.

The current state of affairs locally (economic and social in both Cayman and Jamaica) may incite despair of 'back in the days', the 'Good ole Days', and the temptation to consider that God has forsaken the believers. But remember -

- When faced with life's disappointments, like Job, we must declare that regardless of the now – 'I will behold God for myself'.

Possible song, 'For I Know that my Redeemer Lives'

(Pirate's Week is a Caymanian festival that has had mixed reactions from the church. Please recall that in reality many pirates worked for the Crown during war-time and were left to their own devices during peace treaties. They thus lived in a very tenuous space, not as romantic as movies have presented. If choosing to incorporate Pirate's Week in the Liturgy, consider how to factor the uncertainties they faced in the reflections.)

Prayer Corner

Renew our strength, Lord. Fill us with your supernatural power to overcome each obstacle in our path. With our eyes on you, Lord, with you walking beside us, working through us, We can make it.

Thank you, Lord!
